I am opposed to the new work place exam rule. I work with several mining companies to recycle their ultra large mining tires. Any rule that cannot be directly explained and clarified is no good. Your current work place exam rule is doing its job. Mines are safer than they have ever been and with the influx of extra inspectors the mines are already under severe scrutiny. Unless you are looking to kill the mining industry in the USA and effectively run yourselves out of a job you need to understand that the mines cannot and will not be able to continue with all the different agencies trying to take a piece of them.

Thank you,
