General Comment

The rules that limit the amount of coal and rock dust miners are allowed to breathe should NOT be streamlined or rolled back.

The existing regulations need to be kept in place. Trying to cut costs when people's safety is at stake is NOT okay. I think it's a very bad signal to send to coal miners ...The Trump administration does not have coal miners' best interests at heart. They're aligned with coal mine operators as opposed to miners, and the only reasons they would want to reopen these rules or revisit these rules are to weaken them.
