Hello

I am a compliance tech at ICG. I agree that the safety of coal miners is very important. Currently I run company dust samples at our mines, I know how difficult it is to meet the current standards. I think it would make more sense to make it a law that respirators be worn by the miners this would be much more beneficial to their health then lowering the standard so low it can't be complied with. We all know there is dust in the mines and we do everything possible to help control the dust but it is always be there. So to me respirators would be the best way to help control the dust thank you for your time
